

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Michael Albert works full time for ZCommunications, especially in maintaining its web systems called ZNet and ZSocial. He has been involved in social change activism, organizing, and media work since the 1960s and has written nearly twenty books and hundreds of articles, essays, and so on. He has been developing and advocating vision and strategy for a better society, which has helped generate the visions called participatory economics and participatory society. His most recent engagement is to help bring into existence a new International Organization for Participatory Society. E-mail: sysop@zmag.org

Gar Alperovitz is the Lionel R. Bauman Professor of Political Economy at the University of Maryland, College Park Department of Government and Politics, a founder of the Democracy Collaborative at the University of Maryland, and a member of the board of directors for the New Economic Institute. He has written extensively on community-based political and economic development, especially on new institutions of community ownership of wealth, on political-economic theory as related to issues such as democracy, liberty, and community sustainability. E-mail: garalper@gmail.com

Alessandra B. Azevedo is a professor at the Agrarian, Environmental, and Biological Studies Center of the Universidade Federal do Recôncavo da Bahia, UFRB, Brazil. She holds a PhD from the Department of Scientific and Technological Policy of the Universidade Estadual de Campinas, Unicamp, Brazil, and is coordinator of the Technology in Cooperative Administration Program at the UFRB. Her work focuses on worker self-management in Spain and Brazil, including production management, enterprise networks, cooperation, solidarity economy, and local production arrangements. E-mail: abaazevedo@gmail.com

Gregor Gall is a research professor of industrial relations at the University of Hertfordshire, UK. He is author of four books and editor of four works on unions and union organizing, and writes a fortnightly column in the Morning Star, the daily newspaper of the union movement in Britain. E-mail: g.gall@herts.ac.uk

Leda Gitahy is a professor at the Department of Scientific and Technological Policy of the Universidade Estadual de Campinas, Unicamp, Brazil. She holds a PhD in sociology by Uppsala University, Sweden. She has done considerable field research on the car, auto parts, and white goods industries. She has articles published in journals in Brazil and elsewhere on the labor process, labor skills, technological change and labor, subcontracting, and supply chains. E-mail: leda@ige.unicamp.br

José Brendan Macdonald is professor emeritus and does community work at the Universidade Federal da Paraíba, João Pessoa, Brazil where he founded the Incubator of Solidarity Enterprises and is now one of its coordinators. He has written on solidarity economics mostly in Portuguese. His “Reflections on Mammonism,” published in volume 10, issue 3, 1997 of Nature, Science & Thought, is one of his most important writings and one of the few available in English. E-mail: jobremac@gmail.com

Dada Maheshvarananda is a monk, activist, and writer. Author of After Capitalism: Prout's Vision for a New World, which has been published in ten languages. He is director of the Prout Research Institute of Venezuela. Born in the United States, he became a monk in 1978 and has taught meditation and yoga around the world, including in several prisons. He has given hundreds of seminars and workshops around the world about social issues, spiritual values, and cooperative games. E-mail: maheshvarananda@prout.org

Juan Carlos Monedero holds a doctorate in political science and sociology at the Universidad Complutense, Madrid at whose Department of Political Science and Administration II he teaches. He has been an advisor to the Venezuelan government and is a member of the Centro Internacional Miranda, Caracas. He has written on new forms of political participation, the fight against poverty, and so on. Recent works of his include El gobierno de las palabras. Política para tiempos de confusión, FCE, México, 2009, and Disfraces del Leviatán: el papel del Estado en la globalización neoliberal, Akal, Madrid, 2009. E-mail: jcmonedero@cps.ucm.es

Heloisa Primavera is a doctoral candidate in economics at the Universidad de Buenos Aires and has written extensively on solidarity economics, especially on social currencies. She is a professor at the School of Economics and at the School of Social Sciences at the University of Buenos Aires. She is a founder of the Latin American Network on Solidarity Socioeconomy—www.redlases.org.ar—and the Colibri Project, which offers training for agents of endogenous development, and since 1996 has studied barter clubs and solidarity economics in Argentina and Latin America. E-mails: heloisa@alliance21.org and heloisa.primavera@gmail.com

Peter Ranis, professor emeritus at the PhD Program in Political Science Graduate Center, City University of New York, has done research on political economy and labor studies in Argentina, Cuba, and elsewhere in Latin America and the United States. He has written numerous peer-reviewed journal essays and four books, including Class, Democracy and Labor in Contemporary Argentina (also published in Spanish) and Argentine Workers: Peronism and Contemporary Class Consciousness. E-mail: ranis@york.cuny.edu

Vishwas Satgar is a senior lecturer in International Relations at the University of Witwatersrand, South Africa. Antisystemic alternatives and alternative world orders are of his key research interests. He is also a founder and board chairperson of the Cooperative and Policy Alternative Center (COPAC), a leading grassroots NGO in South Africa championing the Solidarity Economy alternative. E-mail: copac@icon.co.za

Jeff Shantz is a rank-and-file union and antipoverty organizer and scholar. He has been active in his union's flying squad and helped to found the local's antipoverty working group. His ongoing research is on worker self-activity, including green syndicalism, connections between radical ecology and labor organizing. He teaches human rights and community advocacy at Kwantlen Polytechnic University in Vancouver, Canada. E-mail: jeffrey.shantz@kwantlen.ca or shantz@radicalcriminology.org